Letters: Obamacare is kryptonite now

Re "Is Obamacare too big to fail?" Opinion, April 6

The effort to repeal the Affordable Care Act became fantasy with the first few sign-ups, hesitant and difficult as they were.

Like every sort of entitlement program, once you have any beneficiaries, getting rid of the program is political kryptonite. People continue to kick and scream about the law, about the website, about the cost of premiums, about the coverage, about finding doctors and more, but the only thing they will hate more is being told they have to start all over again with some new program. That is never going to happen.

If repeal is the GOP's fall banner, it deserves the defeat it will get.
